Foreign Intelligence News

New US National Counterintelligence Executive

On 24 July 2003, US President George W. Bush announced his intention to appoint Michelle Van Cleave, Special Assistant to the Under Secretary for Policy at the Department of Defense, National Counterintelligence Executive in his administration. According to the White House Press Release,

[b]efore joining the Department of Defense in 2001, [Van Cleave] served as President of National Security Concepts, Inc., a Washington, D.C. firm. During the 105th Congress, Ms. Van Cleave was Staff Director and Chief Counsel for the Senate Judiciary Subcommittee on Technology, Terrorism and Government Information. She earlier served at the White House in the Office of Science and Technology Policy, both as General Counsel and Assistant Director for National Security Affairs. Ms. Van Cleave holds a bachelor's and a master's degree from the University of Southern California, and a J.D. from the U.S.C. School of Law.

According to journalists Bill Gertz and Rowan Scarborough, "[t]he national counterintelligence executive is in charge of a new interagency office created to strengthen U.S. counterintelligence and counterespionage capabilities. The office is a central authority for counterintelligence assessments, damage assessments from spy cases and producing warnings of intelligence threats."
